Legion To Start Membership Drive

Outpost Meetings to Be Resumed by Post Next Month

Legionnaires started their drive for 1932 members Thursday night at the second October meeting of the post, which was held at the city hall. It was explained that all 1931 cards expired with the closing of the National Legion Convention in September. To be in good standing, it is necessary to take ou ta 1932 card at once.

An emergency membership drive was started, in order to raise enough money to payy off current bills of the post, and to present the state department of the Legion with a surprise in the number of members secured at the state meeting of Post Commanders and Adjutants, Sunday, October 24. Money has been borrowed from the local Auxiliary unit, and from another source, to pay the indebtedness of the post, incurred partly through maintaining an office for making out loans on adjusted service certificates last spring. However the post is striving to repay these loans as soon as possible, through the sale of memberships. Of the $3.50 income from each member each year, $2.50 goes to state and national headquarters, and for publications of the Legion.

Two teams were chosen t oconduct an emergency drive, which will closr Saturday, October 24. They are John Dawson, Bennie Wellborn, and Claude Agee on one side, and B. C. Hollis and V. E. Smith on the other.

Post Commander J. L. Stringer appointed the following emergency membership committee to solicit renewals in the county: Sydney Stone, McCaskill; A. H. Wade, Blevins; Finis Johnson, Washington; Walter Baber, Ozan; Dave Dickinson, Fulton; Cecil Walace, Saratoga; Jack Kauffman, Okay; Allen Johnson, Spring Hill; Jerome Drake, Patmos; Jim Wilson, Columbus; Ferd Holt, Bingen; and Lee Gorham of DeAnn. Half of these men will be placed on one team and half on the other.

Out-post meetings are to be resumed the third Thursday night in November, when the Leslie Huddleston post will accept the invitation of the Legionnaires from Washington, and meet at the Civil War State Capitol building htere.

V. E. Smith, athletic officer, and B. R. Hamm, district commander were appointed to accept the challenge of the Prescott post, to stage an all-star football game between the posts on November 11. In which city this game will be played has not yet been decided. A large number of former fotball men in this county have signified their willingness to try out for the team of the local post.

Expect Big Crowd For Lever Friday

Manager Cox Announces Larger Advance by Mid-South Co-Op

In a statement forecasting a record attendance at the address to be given Friday night in Hope city hall by former Congressman A. F. Lever, of the Federal Farm Loan Board, on "The Present Situation in Agriculture," Manager Max Cox announced Friday morning that the Hope district office of the Mid-South Cotton office, which is sponsoring Mr. Lever's appearance, has also increased its advance payment to farmers entering the co-operative this season.

"We have increased the advance payment," Mr. Cox said, "and have cut the margin or hold-back from 100 points to 95. The Mid-South is also offering a better basis than earlier in the week.

"This may be news to some—but we have paid as high as 10 cents a pound for some cotton offered here this season. J. S. Wilson, of Columbus, sold us 40 bales, some of which brought better than 10 cents, and a considerable amout sold for 9. The 10-cent cotton one and a quarter inches."

Budget System Is Explained To City By Mayor Vesey

Hope Executive Outlines Financial Structure to Rotarians

REVENUES $30,000

City Must Build Up Surplus to Cover Depreciation Charge

Although a city budget is the best means of controlling municipal expenses, even a budget has to provide a considerable surplus in order to be sure of keeping within the year's revenues, as required by law, Mayor John Vesey told Hope Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

Revenues rise and fall from one year to another, fluctuating as much as $4,000 or $5,000; and expenses such as the fire department depend upon how frequently the firemen are called out, the mayor said.

Principal Revenues

Speaking on a Rotary program sponsored by Pat Duffie, Mr. Vesey said:

"City finances are based on a 5-mill tax, a constitutional limitation, except for the right to issue bonds and pay for same with an additional 5-mill tax.

"The second source of revenue for the City of Hope is the turnback of one-half of the 3-mill road tax.

"These two revenues are the most certain the city can depend on, and they yield on the average from $16,000 to $18,000 a year combined.

"An auto license tax of $2.50 a year shows a total of 800 licenses in Hope this year—a new high record—including some licenses for the half year at $1.25. The net on the license tax is about $1,500.

"The street tax yields another $2,000, with incidental taxes such as theater, carnival, pool hall, restaurant and dryage licenses.

"The total expectation on city revenues is about $30,000 a year.

"Against this we have an average total of regular expense of about $1,800 a month, not counting depreciation, which, of course, is an item that has to be given due consideration.

Plans for the Year

"The way we are tackling the problem of reducing the city's indebtedness—which, however, is small by comparison with other cities in the state, is this: We are going to anticipate not more than $14,000 of our most certain revenues, the 5-mill and 3-mill road taxes, leaving us a surplus on these two items of from $2,000 to $4,000.

"Against Hope's indebtedness we have some tremendous assets. The city hall stands us between $70,000 and $80,000; and the municipal water and light plant has a value of from $250,000 to $500,000."

Touching on the subject of the municipal plant, Mayor Vesey declared he stood for segregation of municipal plant and city finances, and that each should stand on its own feet. "Some people believe the plant and city finances should be scrambled as part of one and the same thing," the mayor said, "but my conception of the municipal plant is that it should be run at the least possible expense, for the lowest safe rate, for its owners—the consumers. City finance should be spearate, and should take care of its just debts."

The mayor observed that wherever the budget system fails to achieve its main purpose—the holding of expenses within the year's revenues—it is usually due to public interest in some worth-while cause. Yet the law requires a city to stay inside its revenues, and generally the budget system is the best means of reaching this end, he concluded.

John Greene, formerly of Hope, but now of Little Rock, was a visitor Friday.

President C. C. Spragins presided, and E. F. McFaddin made a brief announcement of the meeting Friday night at the city hall when former Congressman Level will speak to the cotton producers of this section.

Death Charges Are Dismissed In Court

Arkansas Girl Changes Testimony in Trial in Kentucky

MOREHEAD, Ky. — (AP) — Murder charges against Herbert Clark, 22 Louisville, and William Morano, Scranton, Pa., were dismissed in circuit court here Thursday after Fay Gilmore, 15, had reversed her testimony that they killed Drexel Gullett, 19, alias Richard Prine.

Gullett was found sereval weeks ago by the roadside near here and the girl first claimed there had been a quarrel among the men after Morano had picked up her, Gullet and Clark as they were hitch hiking to Huntington, W. Va., Gullett's home, where she said she and Gullett were to be married. She had said Morano struck Gullett on the head and that he died after they had removed his clothes and laid him in a ditch. He died in a hospital without being able to say who was responsible.

The dismissal of the charges came on motion of the defense Thursday while Clark was on trial and before defense evidence had been presented. Charges against Morano who was to go on trial later were then dismissed. It was Clark's second trial, the first having ended last week in a hung jury.

The girl, who said her home was in Harrison, Ark., had been held as a material witness.

'Leggers On Move Across Red River; 3 Plants Seized

Sheriff Wilson's Officers Arrest One Man, Seek Two Others

REAL LIQUOR PLANT

Fish Lake Discloses Big Still Sunk in Bottom of Canyon

The largest still in the history of Hempstead county was seized Friday morning in a canyon half a mile east of Fish Lake and about nine miles south of Fulton, by officers of Sheriff John L. Wilson.

It was the third seizure in 12 hours, one man having been arrested with two plants Thursday night.

There is a rumor in circulation that the vigorous prosecution of liquor operators in Miller county is driving the stills and mash-barrels across Red river into Hempstead county. Sheriff Wilson and his officers have been on the alert for the past month, and the seizure Friday morning in the canyon south of Fulton proved to be a brand new plant which had not yet completed its first run.

It was a copper still, of 500 gallon capacity. Fifteen hundred gallons of mash also was seized.

Complete Factory

The plant was complete to the last detail. Sunk in a steep canyon, it was invisible from the surrounding country-side, yet had every device necessary to keep its operators supplied with materials.

Here is what Deputy Sheriffs Clarence Baker and Ed VanSickle found when they charged down the canyon Friday morning.

A 1,000-gallon wooden mash vat, a water-well. A pump. A block-and-tackle to swing materials over the sides of the canyon and lower them from the high ground to the bottom of the canyon. Three hundred pounds of cement and 1,500 brick. Soldering tools and a complete carpenter outfit.

Seized Thursday

Two stills, one of 150 gallons and the other 60 gallons capacity, 35 barrells of mash and 30 gallons of whiskey were destroyed, and one arrest was made by Hempstead county officers Thursday.

The plants were found by Sheriff J. L. Wilson and Deputies C. E. Baker, Will Porter and J. A. Pate a half mile east of Fish Lake, near Fulton.

Jodie Fielding, alleged to have been in charge of the stills, which were in operation, was arrested and jailed at Washington, the county seat. Two others said by officers to have been working at the plant, escaped.

Fielding told officers, they said, that he came to Hempstead county from Miller county because he believed he would have less difficulty operating a still.

New Demand For Ex-Soldiers' Bonus

Veterans of Foreign Wars Present Long Petition to Hoover

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Despite President Hoover's repeated opposition to a cash bonus, the Ceterans of Foreign Wars Thursday presented a new demand for immediate payment in full. The president received it in silence.

With only a hasty glance at the 2,000word petition, embodying the organization's complete legislative program, Mr. Hoover stepped outside his office and posed, smiling, for the photographer with the petition-bearer.

He indicated toDarold D. Decoe, of Sacdamento, Cal., newly elected commander-in-chief of the veterans' organization, that he would give more consideration to the document later.

The president's conclusion, however, was considered foregone. It was but little more than three weeks ago that he went to Detroit to carry his anti-cash bonus fight successfully to the by name, he left no doubt of his meantion. Without mentioning the bonus floor of the American Legion convening when he told the close-packed hall:

"We can carry our present expenditures without jeopardy to national stability. We can cary no more without grave risks."

Finding Real Gold

It would be interesting to know just how those Canadian youngsters who stumbled onto two boxes of hidden gold feel about it all, now that the first flush of excitement has died away.

These lads, as you probably remember, were poking around in the brushwood somewhere near Windsor, Ont., when they found two cigar boxes full of pure gold. Evidently someone had brought this down from the northern mines and had hidden it in an out-of-the-way place while he went to attend to some other business; but the boys found it, and the province of Ontario has taken possession of it while it tries to find the real owner.

But the interesting thing is that these lads actually succeeded in doing something which some millions of other boys have tried to do without success. They really found gold, buried in a couple of boxes.

For boyhood has many dreams, and goes off on innumerable little adventures in search of some reality that may resemble those dreams, but in its heart of hearts it knows that its dreams are as insubstantial as the autumn haze, and it has not the slightest expectation of making them come true. And that, perhaps, is why it gets so much fun out of them.

Boys, you see, are the worlds only real amateures. The fun of the game is everything to them. There is no goal, there is no ulterior motive. There is just a succession of quests which cannot possibly be fulfilled.

All of us had that spirit, once. But as we grew older we lost it, and we are none the better for the loss. Our war cry since we became adults is the query, "What is there in it?" The cares of this world have made us give up one of our most priceless heritages—the knowledge that the spirit in which we go after something, and the things we do along the way, can mean a whole lot more than actually getting it.

Revising Reserve Bank Rules

A CHANGE in the eligibility provisions of the Federal Reserve Act of the United States is included in the President's program to thaw out the country's frozen banking assets. Though the subject is clothed in technicalities, it is worth while to try to understand it, as banking legislation of the kind now envisaged will have a vital influence on the material welfare of the American people.

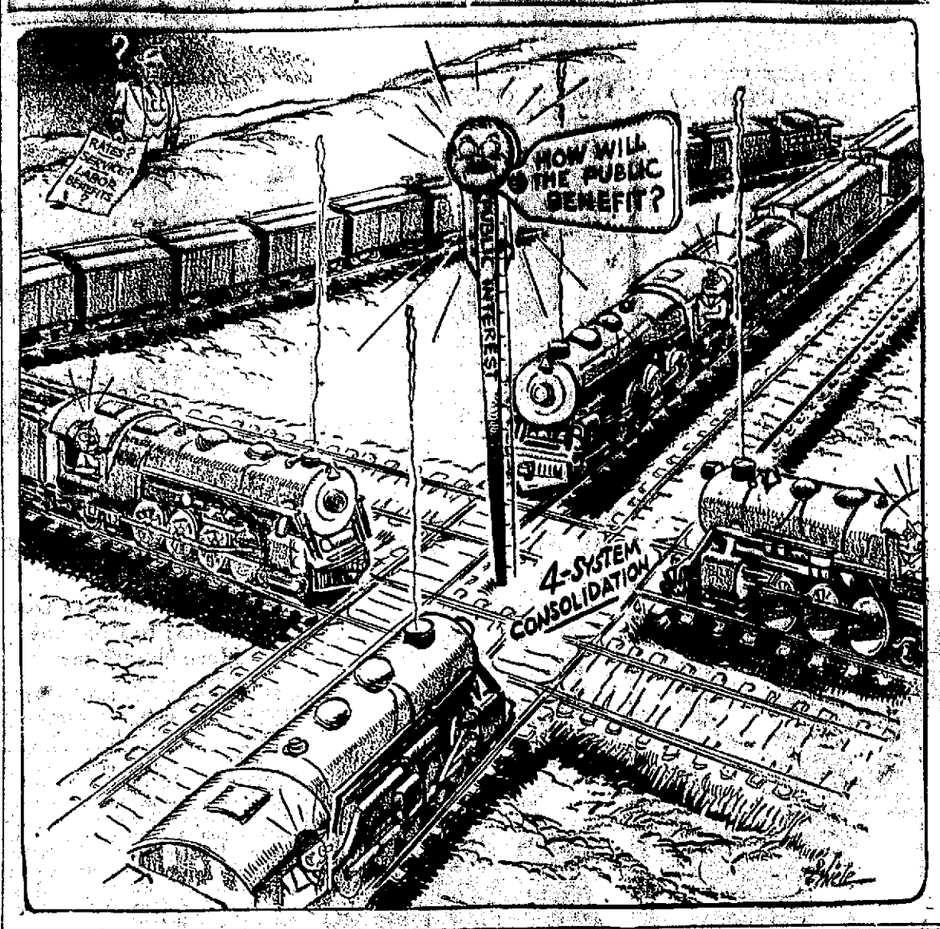

In 1914 the Federal Reserve banks were given the tremendous power of controlling the volume of credit and currency at the community's disposal. They do so in several ways. Of most importance is the lending of funds to the member banks on bills and securities. This keeps the banks supplied with the necessary funds for financing a smooth flow of business activity. It is primarily essential that in order to perform this service without interruption the resources of the system shall be kept liquid. It would never do for the chain of central banks which form the Federal Reserve System to become as frozen with illiquid securities as some of the minor banks. Hence the only securities that the Reserve banks can by law accept in return for their funds are those which may be rapidly translated into cash. Such securities are commercial bills for three months or less and agricultural bills having a maturity under nine months.

With the slowing down of business, the supply of commercial and agricultural paper runs down too, and, as at present, may also be more or less concentrated in the major city banks. The national credit and banking situation in other words, may be frozen in the ice of Federal Reserve banking limitations. President Hoover's move to establish a credit pool is an immediate method of making a hole in that ice so that the country's idle resources may flow into use. When Congress meets, it will consider permanent measures whereby the rediscounting privileges of the Federal Reserve System may be broadened sufficiently to prevent the recurrence of this jam.

President Hoover has given no indication of the new securities that should be admitted to the eligibility provision. Members of Congress will reconvene with very definite ideas on the subject. Some would include certain classes of corporate securities and real estate mortgages. Herein lies a great danger. It would be folly to thaw out the country banks at the expense of freezing the Federal Reserve System.

The ideal way of attending to the mortgage problem, as has been pointed out in these columns, is to establish a central mortgage bank on the European model with or without Federal Reserve participation. This, however, need not prevent the acquisition by the Federal Reserve System of permissive powers to rediscount any sound collateral in a solvent bank, subject to suitable safeguards. Such a provision would be merely a paraphase of an emergency power which exists in the charter of every central bank in Europe. In Great Britain a loan of this kind is called a "Lombard loan"—a loan for which there exist no restrictions upon the discretion of the central bank in respect of the kind of collateral offered for it. Some such elasticity surely should be introduced in the American fiscal system.—Christian Science Monitor.

Can They Clear the Blocks?

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — What probably intensified realization of the depression here more than anything else was the departure from the Senate of Tom Heflin of Alabama and Cole Blease of South Carolina. Some of us thought the nation's salvation rested on those two shrinking violets and the rest of us thought they provided a certain gayety and charm badly needed in these parts, but life seemed more grimly serious after they went away.

It did, anyway, until Senator Jim Davis of Pennsylvania suddenly decided that he would have to fight all this depression, unemployment and wage-cutting single-handed. The announcement from his office falls like a bursting bombshell among apathetic politicians who, it is implied by the senator's press-agent, have been asleep at the switch, leaving the whole problem to Jim Davis.

The senator's declaration of war on the depression is issued in the form of a news story marked for "Immediate Release" and you can just get out your hip boots and read through this first paragraph:

"As Capitol Hill was slowly regaining its pre-session serenity which was disturbed by the repercussions of wage cutting policies announced by several of our nation's largest industries, along with charges of nepotism directed against many members of congress in the employment of office assistants, whose salaries are paid by the federal government, one outstanding fact is apparent, namely, that United States Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania shows consistency to his ideals by practicing what he 'preaches' in regard to the maintenance of prevailing wage scales, as a fundamental factor toward the revival of substantial national prosperity."

* * *

HUNDREDS of correspondents had been hunting the day's "outstanding" story, whatever it might be, and here was Jim giving it to them hot off the pan, all written. They read on feverishly;

"Senator Davis proved his fidelity in this regard" by announcing he wouldn't reduce the salary of any office employe paid from his own pocket . . . service work of a senator from Pennsylvania necessitates a "far larger office staff" than could be provided by the government clerk allowance. . . . "For example," he said, smiling whimsically. . . . "Senator Davis has been solicited by Pennsylvanians to assist them in finding work and his office remains open from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., while most senators remain on the job from 10 to 2, during the summer months." . . . Davis gets and sends more mail than any other senator.

Davis is a senator and a former cabinet member and this ought to be a lesson to those who have never before taken him seriously. Ninety-seven other senators doubtless will bow their heads in shame.

* * *

THEREFORE it has been understood that Davis only comes to Washington now and then because he is so busy making speeches with a view to renomination and re-election next year, that workers on his personal payroll are there for press-agentry, speech-writing and other political purposes, that much of the mail has to do with getting his fellow Moose to whoop up demonstrations in towns where Jim is billed for speeches and that Jim is pretty scared about his political future because of threats of opposition from Smedley Butler and Governor Pinchot.

Now these reports appear to have been proved base canards such as are often inflicted upon some of our noble public servants. The senator's rousing cheers for himself also seem to disprove such ideas—previously accepted as facts—as that when a senator doesn't cut wages it isn't news and when he does it is, that all senators — not only Jim — are constantly besought for jobs, that no senator stays here all summer and that only 15 or 20 of them are here for as much as a few days at a time between sessions.

It's going to be a long, hard winter and one pleasantly anticipates many more such scoops from the Davis news bureau.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 321

If stores of dry and learned lore we gain
We keep them in the memory of the brain;
Names, things, facts—whate'er we knowledge call,
There is the common ledger for them all;
And images on this cold surface traced
Make slight impressions and are soon effaced.
But we've a page more glowing and more bright
On which our friendship and our love to write;
That these may never from the soul depart,
We trust them to the memory of the heart.
There is no dimming—no effacement here;
Each pulsation keeps the record clear;
Warm golden letters all the tablet fill,
Nor lose their luster til the heart stands still.—Daniel Webster.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Marks Episcopal church will meet Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. M. H. Barlow on North Hervey street.

The October meeting of the Womans Christian Temperance Union, which was held on Thursday afternoon at the city hall was devoted largely to convention reports, which were full of interest to all who are anxious to further the cause of temperance. Mrs. K. G. McRae, Sr. gave a most helpful devotional, basing her remarks on the last fourteen verses of James. Mrs. H. H. Stuart, president of the local union, who was a delegate to the fifty-third annual Arkansas W. C. T. U. convention, recently held at Prescott, stated that Mrs. L. B. Crenshaw, state president, urged the education of the youth as the most potent means of advancing temperance ideals. It was brought out that it is unlawful for temperance education to be banished from our tax-supported public schools, and a strenuous effort should be made to enforce the law. The slogan for the coming year will continue as in the past, "Enforcement, not repeal." Canadian Liquor Control, was discussed by W. J. Losinger, who stated that "distance lent enchantment, and that the dry forces of Canada realized their law was anything but desirable, and that Governmental control was a flat failure. There are to be twenty-five regional conferences held throughout the United States, prior to the national convention in Seattle next summer. All are designated to help strengthen the machinery of enforcement—not repeal. The convention was largely attended and the Prescott people entertained lavishly for their guests. Mrs. Jennie Carr Pittman, founder of the Prescott Union, which is this year celebrating its fortieth anniversary, and an outstanding temperance worker for nearly half a century, was repeatedly honored for her work and the powerful influence she has unfalteringly wielded during that time. She was elected a delegate to the next national convention. Mrs. Stuart announced that Miss Lurline Moody, state L. T. L. worker, who staged such a delightful pageant, "A Patriotic Wedding," during the convention, would visit Hope in the near future for the organization of the youth of the city, and bespoke the hearty cooperation of all.

Mrs. Thos. Klght and little daughter, Barbara, who have been guests of friends for the past ten days left Friday for their home in Whitewright, Tex.

Circle No. 4 of the Womans Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. George Spragins on North Louisiana street. Mrs. G. Frank Miles and Mrs. Finley Ward will spend Saturday visiting with friends in Camden.

Mrs. Eddie Spragins was hostess on Thursday evening to the members of Just a Mere Bridge club and a number of special guests at her home on North Louisiana street. The card rooms were bright and attractive with a quantity of lovely fall flowers and the players were seated at four tables, with Mrs. Elliot Johnson, Mrs. Russell Henderson, Miss Lovena Rugles, Miss Emma Green and Miss Mary Jones as special guests. The club favor went to Miss Merle Vick and Mrs. Elliott Johnson scored high for the guests. Following the game, hostess served a most delicious desert course with punch.

S. B. Henry made a business trip to Texarkana on Friday.

Benjamin Haynes of Ouachita college, Arkadelphia, will arrive Friday night to spend the week end visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Haynes.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed McCorkle, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Brown and Mrs. Gus Haynes motored to Arkadelphia on Friday for the football game between Ouachita college and the college of the Ozarks

The Alathean class of the First Baptist Sunday school held their regular monthly business meeting this week with Mrs. Fred White, Mrs. J. L. Bowden, Mrs. Laura Smith, Mrs. Henry Atkinson, Mrs. Jeff Murphey, Miss Bess Walker, Miss Ruth Hawthorne as hostesses. The Halloween motif was observed in the social hour, at which time, many amusing stunts and contests were held, the outstanding feature being a visit to "The Spookyard," where the guests were confronted by departed spirits, and all kinds of spooky suggestions. The guests were all masked and Mrs. Harry Shiver won the prize for guessing the names of the greatest number of ghosts. During a short business period it was decided that the class would have a contest lasting two months. The hostesses served a delicious salad plate.

Mrs. Charles M. Clark and Mrs. Will Huie of Arkadelphia spent Friday in the city, the guests of Crs. Clark's sister, Mrs. Dan Green and Mr. Green.

Polk Deputy Sheriff Bitten by Copperhead

MENA, Ark.—W. E. Hungate, former game warden, and now a deputy under Sheriff John E. Joplin, was bitten by a copperhead snake while in the woods along Two-Mile creek, Wednesday. The reptile sank its fangs in Deputy Hungate's left leg, above the ankle, and the man was unaware of what had caused the wound until his companion, Deputy Frank Pearson espied the snake and shot it. First aid was given Hungate and he was later brought to Mena for medical attention. It is not expected the wound will prove serious. Though he has hunted over the Ouachitas for 35 years, this is the first time Hungate had been snake bitten.

State Body Increases Dues 10 Cents; to Convene Here Next Year

EL DORADO—An increase of 10 cents in state dues and selection of Little Rock as site of the 1932 convention, marked the final session of the Arkansas Council of Parents and Teachers here Thursday.

The total charge for membership now is 20 cents, 10 cents going to the state organization, five cents to the national and five cents to the Bulletin. The individual city councils are maintained by their own dues which are kept separate from the state and national assessments.

The selection of Little Rock as the convention city next year came after spirited opposition from delegates from Hot Springs, Fort Smith and Texarkana.

Certificates were awarded to superior and standard organizations. Forty-three superior councils and 25 standard councils were certified. Members said that the large percentage of superior councils again would give Arkansas first place in the national organization for superior councils. Hope reported a 100 per cent organization, all four units being classified as superior. Texarkana came next with five out of six units being superior.

Dr. Carolyn Hedger of Chicago, a lecturer sent out by the Elidabeth McCormick Foundation in the interest of child welfare, spoke on "What the Community Owes the Child." Dr. J. R. Grant of Russellville delivered an address on "the Self-Made Citizen."

She will represent Arkansas in the bread judging contest at the International Livestock Show in Chicago in December.

Saenger Theater

Saturday Only

Last but by no means least, on Saturday, one day only, you will be offered a picture the only one that compares with the now famous "Trader Horn", that's "East of Borneo." One of the most exciting pictures ever filmed. It carries you 9,000 miles into the jungle to show you countless myriad wonders never before beheld by the eye of mortal man, it is one of the strangest most weired but true stories of the jungle ever made. It has scenes in it that outstrip the imagination, more animals than Noah's Ark, greater than a ten ring circus. It will be one of the marvels of your whole life. And on the same program Harry Carey in that great chapter play, "Vanishing Legion," and Mickey the Mouse.

Coming Sunday-Monday

The Saenger Theatre is pleased indeed to offer for your pleasure Ann Harding in "Devotion," her greatest picture with Leslie Howard and O. P. Heggie. This is truly a wonderful picture and one that you will all enjoy to the fullest extent. It has just completed a ful week's run in Little Rock at the RKO Majestic Theatre where it was held over for an extended run by popular demand. Don't miss Ann Harding in "Devotion."

Georgian Convicted of Shooting 29 Years Ago

CLARKSVILLE, Ga.—(AP)—Convicted in superior court here Wednesday of shooting a neighbor 29 years ago, Juan Gurley, 64 year old mountaineer, was sentenced to serve three to eight years in prison.

In June, 1902, John Hawks was fired upon and seriously wounded as he walked along a country road. Gurley was accused but the county sheriff could not locate him.

In May 1910, Milford and Homer Hyatt, father and son, were shot and gravely wounded soon after Gurley was seen in the community for the first time in eight years. He was accused of this shooting also, but again the sheriff never succeeded in finding him.

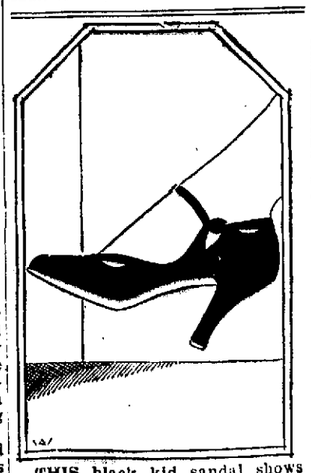

Sheriff Ed Jones recently learned Gurley was visiting at his brother's home far in the mountains. The officers hurried there and arrested him.

Solicitor General Robert McMillan searched the countryside for witnesses and finally found a number of older residents who were familiar with the details of the attacks.

Kearns in Form

Pachyderms Come In

WITH the first chilly blast from the north, pachyderms have begun to lumber into Manhattan in droves, seeking winter booking. M. Jacques Curley, master of the mastodons, reports that he has handled the employment applications of more than 200 of the animals in the last week or so. Just wait until it knows; there will be elephant tracks all over the sidewalks of New York.

The Mark Stands

DURING the field meets held in several major league cities toward the end of the baseball season efforts were made to better the record for throwing a baseball, 426 feet 9½ inches, made years ago at Redland Field by Sheldon Lejeune. Ben Chapman tossed it 392 feet 10 inches, and that was as close as anybody came to Lejeune's mark. The old-timers must have been good.

Force of Tradition

PURDUE and Indiana play every year for the honor of carrying home an old oaken bucket. Michigan and Minnesota battle for possession of an old brown jug. A few years ago captains at the University of Colorado and the Colorado Aggies bet their shirt on the outcome of the game, and the custom has been continued. Illinois and Ohio, state universities, fight for ownership of a turtle called Illibuck. Princeton and Rutgers used to fight over the possession of a cannon that George Washington left behind, and the Princeton bonfire of victory is staged annually near this cannon (in years when Princeton manages to win).

These things mean nothing to the professionals. They play for money. When the paid elevens take the field it is every man for himself. Cannons or old oaken buckets are as naught to them.

But the fact remains that the boys in college are stirred by traditions in such a way that monetary recompense sinks into insignificance. What causes football players to play their greatest game: hope of a "raise in salary" or heroic ambition?

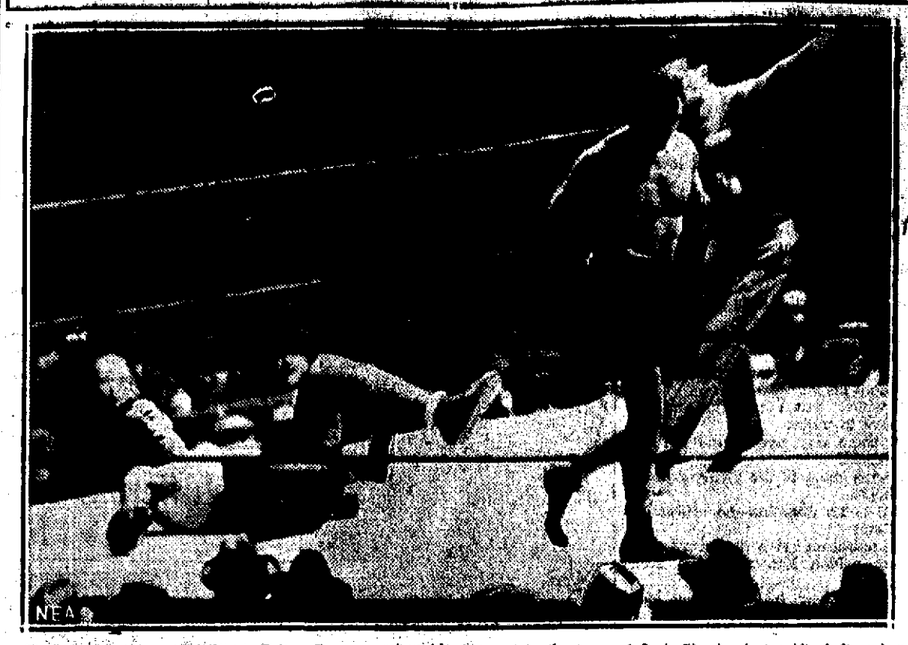

Your answer depends upon whatever idealism you entertain.

Now, how's that for a snappy sermon?

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

RACE tracks around New York City have been taking it on the chin. . . . The public does not like to play small fields. . . . Roger Cramer of the A's started out in life to be a carpenter. . . . Jimmy Wilson is one of the few catchers in the business who can run. . . . They call Jim Moore, the A's utility outfielder, "Hollywood" because he wears loud clothes and sometimes drags a walking stick around with him. . . . A pretty good crowd of young players were eligible for the draft this year. . . . Rochester, the Cardinal farm, probably leads all other teams in the number of hot ones.

"The Bigger They Are!"

He fell a long way, did titanic Primo Carnera, when his jaw got in the way of Jack Sharkey's terrific left swing. Here you see the Italian heavyweight giant sprawled on the canvas as his Boston opponent turned triumphantly away in the exciting fourth round of their bout at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, N. Y. When, afew seconds later, Carnera got up on one knee and then slumped down again, Sharkey wanted the Italian disqualified for going down without being hit. But Referee Smith shown here beginning the count, ordered the fighters to go on. I twas Sharkey's victory on points after the battle went the full 15 rounds.

Louisiana Faculty Gives Six Sons to Grid Squad

ALEXANDRIA, La.—(AP)—If there ere any absent minded professors at Louisiana college, they don't forget when it's time for a football game.

That's because five professors have sons on the football team.

Dean H. M. Weathersby has two sons on the team; Hal, fullback, and Scott, center; Prof. J. E. Caldwell and Prof. J. E. Temple root for the halfbacks James Caldwell and Benton Temple.

Quarterback Ed Brakefield is the son of Prof. J. E. Brakefield, and John Strother, halfback, is the son of Prof. W. Strother.

Kansas State Grid Team Has Backs in Quantity

MANHATTAN, Kan.—(AP)—Whatever his troubles, Coach "Bo" McMillin isn't going to be bothered by a lack of backfield material at Kansas State college this fall.

To give him the widest possible choice there are heavyweight ball carriers in abundance as well as lighter backs.

Four sophomores plus George Wiggins and Elden Auker, veterans, make up the huskier group. Their average is just under 190 pounds.

The "pony" candidates, who would be considered exceptionally rugged at some schools, are 10 in number and average around 165.

They include an even half dozen veterans, two of them—Glenn Harsh and Ray McMillin—are letter men.

Brand Name Proposed for All Nevada Crops

RENO.—(AP)—Any product on the market hereafter bearing the brand, Diamond "N," will signify its Nevada origin.

A move to use such label on all quality products has been launched by the Nevada honey producers association, adopting the brand used for several years by the Nevada turkey growers association.

The Ripper

Here's one of the principal reasons Georgia is one of the favorites for the Southern Conference championship this year. Jack "The Ripper" Roberts, fullback for the Athens Bulldogs, is considered one of the greatest line plungers in the country. He is now playing his last season.

It's easy to understand why a fellow with a one-track mind often goes off his trolley, says the office sage.

Southern States Asked to Join in Slash Move

JACKSON, Miss.—(AP)—The Mississippi house of representatives Wednesday memorialized southern states growing cotton to join in the enactment of legislation for the curtailment of acreage in 1932 and 1933.

Representative Sillers of Bolivar county offered the resolution which was unanimously adopted and sent to the senate for immediate consideration.

Mississippi joined Texas and Arkansas in cotton curtailment Tuesday with the signing of the Robert-Sillers 50 per cent acreage reduction bill, in which action hte state received the praise of Carl Williams of the federal farm board.

Barter Betters Price for Farmer's Wheat

LOCKNEY, Texas.—(AP)—Here is one local farmer's answer to the question, "What are you going to use for money?"

Guy Ramsey had an over-supply of wheat, but needed a good many other things.

First, he traded wheat for a calf to be fattened and butchered for home consumption, and on the way home exchanged some more wheat for barley, to fatten the calf. He later made a similar exchange for alfalfa.

On the same day Ramsey traded wheat for coal on a pound for pound basis, realizing 33 1-3 cents a bushel for wheat that was worth only 21 cents on the market.

Marquette university's fotball teams had undefeated seasons in 1907, 1911, 1917, 1918, 1922, 1923 and 1930.

When Winter Comes

IS YOUR house packed to the eaves with tremendous stores of flour, meat, clothing, and other supplies to carry yo uthrough the long winter?

Not very likely!

But if not, won't you—like the butterfly that played all summer without a thought of the cold days to come—won't you be in danger of facing famine, months before spring comes round again?

Certainly not!

When wintry winds are blowing their coldest, and the storm is wailing like forgotten banshees on the rooftop, the chances are you may be eating juicy strawberries from Costa Rica and fresh asparagus from Florida. For the day of storing up supplies against the barrenness of winter has gone forever. It passed when America ceased to be a lot of scatterd communities, and became a nation united by swift lines of transportation.

As you read the advertisements telling you just what the stores contain for you, fresh to your order, remember that here are the inexhaustible storerooms of today—storrooms that have banished forever the anxietis that wnt with the snows of yesteryear.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DIANA JUPITER, wife of the millionaire automobile manufacturer, gives an engagement dinner and dance for her secretary and protege, MARY McKENZIE, who is to marry DIRK RUTHVEN, son of a blue-blooded family.

Mary receives a telephone call from her scapegrace brother, EDDIE, saying he is in trouble and must see her. The house is strictly guarded against "gate-crashers" because Mrs. Jupiter is wearing the famous Jupiter rubies.

Mary arranges for Eddie to be admitted secretly. When she goes upstairs to meet him she finds Mrs. Jupiter robbed and murdered in her room. Running to find her fiance, she finds him in the garden with CORNELIA TABOR, his childhood sweetheart.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III

MARY was too surprised to move for an instant. What could be the matter with Cornelia, that she should behave like that?

At Mary's call, Dirk wheeled about so abruptly that the clinging girl toppled and almost fell.

"Come quick, Dirk! Something terrible has happened!" Without a backward look, Dirk came running and took the steps to her side in a single bound.

"What's wrong? You look scared to death, honey," he asked worriedly. The terror in her eyes stabbed him with concern. His arm went about her protectingly. They drew away, out of Cornelia's hearing and lowered their voices somewhat.

Mary poured out her story in an excited jumble, almost crying with the joy of relief.

"Do you think it's anything to do with Eddie?" she asked anxiously.

Dirk laughed and patted her shoulder. In spite of herself, Mary felt reassured.

"That kid? Why, you're all mixed up. This is something else. That kid wouldn't hurt a fly!" He pressed her hand comfortingly and they started for the house.

Dirk called sharply, "Coming, Connie?"

Cornelia, still standing where he had left her, moved forward convulsively at his command.

They had reached the loggia when Teddy Doulton lumbered toward them out of the darkness, cursing earnestly, and seized upon them as an audience for his griefs.

"Damned idiot!" he exclaimed fervently, rubbing his drooping shoulder. "Ran into me down in the bushes and knocked the breath out of me. And not a word to excuse it—not a word!"

They did not listen. "Have you seen Mr. Jupiter?" Mary paused to ask.

"Have I seen him? No. Ask me if I've seen Jack Dempsey. Yes! Who was the fool, anyhow? Whaddaya ask such people for?"

"Who?" They could not wait for his answer. It was all meaningless chatter anyway—he was drunk enough to have collided with the side of the house.

"That fool I just met. Listen!" he called, plaintively, after them. "You know what—"

"Keep still about Eddie," Dirk said to Mary in a low voice as they entered the house, "till we see what's what. No use mixing him up in it unless we have to. He might have a bad time."

• • •

THE ballroom was deserted now, except for the musicians, who were packing up their instruments. The subdued babble from the dining room indicated that supper was still going on.

It was all at once a topsy-turvy world. The Jupiter mansion no longer belonged to its owner, in effect, but to Inspector Kane, and the men who came with him from county police headquarters. The cream of Southampton's younger set found themselves herded into the ballroom for questioning along with a frightened huddle of servants. It was hours before the questioning, the running up and downstairs, the choking breath of flashlight powder, the hurrying to and fro, ceased.

The murderer, it seemed, had got clear away. Search of the grounds had failed to show any evidence of his coming or going; both the manner of his entrance and of his exit were unaccounted for. This much they gleaned from what they could overhear. Whoever the intruder was, he had done a clean-cut job of it. As the checking of evidence went on, it began to appear that no one except Mary had direct evidence of any sort.

And that was pitiably little and of no practical use.

"I can't," Mary was forced to admit, in reply to Inspector Kane's earnest urging to recall the man's voice she had heard in the murdered woman's room. "It wasn't a voice exactly—it was just a growl, a—ah, I can't explain it. It was just a sound anyone might have made in his throat if he were angry. You'd say if you heard it that he was mad enough to kill."

"It didn't remind you of any voice you'd ever heard before?"

"Why, no!" She was obviously startled.

THE inspector frowned thoughtfully.

"What I am getting at," he was kind enough to explain to them both, in a lowered tone, "is the possibility of an inside job. The butler—do you trust him?"

"Absolutely!" It was a relief to be on safe ground.

The inspector sighed.

"Well, I do, too. I think he's on the level when he says he kept everybody out that hadn't been invited. He had a real argument with one man, he says—nearly threw him out. But Lord, there are a dozen loop-holes. Nobody checked on the cars that came and went, and there were plenty of windows open. Those doors over there," he indicated the French doors opening onto the loggia, "were open when I came in. What do we know about those black-hornt-tooters? Not a thing." He shook his head.

If he had meant to throw Mary off guard by this confidential moment, he succeeded, for she changed color when he asked abruptly: "What were you doing upstairs, Miss Harkness? When you heard the sounds you speak of, and the shots?"

"I—went up to see how Mrs. Jupiter was," Mary faltered. "Someone told me she was tired and had gone to her room to rest."

"You were—alone, up there?"

"Why, yes." What did he mean, Mary wondered fearfully. What did he know?

But his question had had a different meaning, she soon saw from its effect on Dirk. He turned first red, then white, and jumped to his feet. He drew a deep breath.

"She certainly was alone," he said angrily.

"All right, all right," the officer returned, pacifically. "We've got to think of everything, you know. And two witnesses would be better than one."

"I see no reason nor excuse," Dirk said stiffly, "for your thinking of such a thing."

The detective was not riled. Mary was hiding something, he thought, but it was not a love tryst.

"Listen, buddy," he told the glowering Dirk firmly, "stranger things happen every day. No use having tender feelings. I'm just trying to find out what's what."

He tilted his head toward the giggling, milling mob of girls and men who were surging about a young officer named Hayes, whose job it was to take down their names and addresses before letting them go. The indignities of search were over.

"Look at that mob. Unless we got fingerprints, and I doubt it, we got about as much chance of finding the guy who did this as if it never happened. The crook that pulled this was smart. I'll say he was. Everything set to cover up for him. Nobody even heard the shots, except Miss Harkness here, and a few that didnt know what they were when they did hear 'em.

"Any one of them smart kids could have pulled the trick, and hid the gun. And how are we gonna find out who did it?"

"But how about the jewels?" Mary asked.

"We'll find 'em," the officer said gloomily. "We got to. That's every damn thing we've got to go on. But it's going to take time, waiting for them to turn up."

• • •

HE looked like a man in the last throes of depression, but Mary was not sure he was quite sincere. His keen eyes, roving the room, watching the movements of his assistants, the way he pricked up his ears when anyone entered, gave an impression of alertness that his easy-going air belied. For all his conversational attitude toward Dirk and Mary, he had not let them go yet—officially.

Detective Byrne came straight to Kane and reported that every car had been searched before leaving the grounds, with no results.

"Any of them Lorimors?" Kane asked.

Byrne snapped his fingers regretfully. "Damn! I forgot to look for that." He thought a moment intently. "No, I'm positive there wasn't a Lorimor in the lot."

Inspector Kane prepared to move off.

"Well—no offense, young lady?" He got up off the gilt chair he had been straddling. "Have a cigaret?" He held out a crumpled pack, which Mary declined. "Don't smoke, eh?" Mary shook her head. "Well, lotsa girls don't. My wife don't." He appeared to be trying to cover up any awkwardness he had caused.

When the rush for wraps and homeward-bound motors had cleared the room, all that remained were the group of officers, Mary and Dirk, the housekeeper, Mrs. Warren, and, busily speeding the parting guests, Spence.

Once Inspector Kane asked in a low voice, "Where's the old man? Up there?" pointing to the ceiling. Byrne nodded. "Let him stay."

The servants, those who remained, were released and sent off to bed. The sight of their scurrying backs momentarily counfounded Mary. She had forgotten all about Bessie. What had Bessie told, if anything?

As if he read her thought, Inspector Kane turned to one of his men, whose job had been quizzing the servants.

"They don't know nothing," was the other's disgusted report. "They're like a lot of sheep."

"Got 'em all? Sure you didn't miss anybody?" he asked sharply.

The detective retrieved a list from his hip pocket, where he had just stuffed it, and scanned it.

"Two," he said. "A maid named Bessie and a chauffeur. Nobody knows where they've gone."

"Wild Ox" Rips Open Football Grid Lines

WASHINGTON —(AP)— In LeRoy Bordeau, coaches at Georgetown university believe they have one of the country's hardest-hitting fullbacks.

And there's reason for his title—"Wild ox of Adirondacks."

Now a senior, Bordeau has glittered two years with gridiron glory. This year is expected to bring brighter luster.

His home in the Adirondacks of northern New York is nine miles from the nearest town. During his high school days in winter months he often walked the 15 miles to Franklin academy through banks of snow with the temperature sometimes reaching 35 degrees below zero.

He was never absent nor tardy.

And he was a lumberjack of sturdy renown.

He felled 32 trees in one day to win the axe weilding crown of his territory.

Too, he did a little "rasling" and boxing at the Saturday lumberjack reunions. He now uses his hands well enough to win the heavyweight collegiate boxing championship of the South Atlantic.

There's a Kick in This Picture

There is a certain snap in the art of punting, football coaches aver, and you'll agree that this is a rather snappy piece of art. Pretty Lois Harper, dance instructor in Dayton, O., shows the University of Dayton gridders how to kick without bending the knee. The football player pictured above with her is Floyd Evans, but of course you aren't interested in him.

Another Dirigible Planned For Navy

Construction to Start If the Akron Passes Her Tests Successfully

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Postponement of appropriations for the navy until after the general disarmament conference in February was advocated by Representative Wood of Indiana, chairman of the last House Appropriations committee.

Secretary Adams said Tuesday that the proposed sister ship to the Akron, the world's largest dirigible, would be built if the new airship, now completeting her tests, is accepted by the navy. Officials expect her to meet requirements.

Wood, who has opposed large appropriations for the military establishments, said "It would be foolish to expend money for a construction program until the results of the conference are known."

"There is no immediate need," he said, "for a big building program now. We are far away from war."

World financial conditions, he asserted, would prevent any conflict for at least two decades. No one wanted war at this time and it would be "foolish to build aircraft and naval warcraft that would be obsolete in the next war."

Wood also expressed the opinion that the United States never again will build a huge battleship, and that the next war will be fought in the air and with chemicals. He said a chemical process had been discovered with which the entire population of New York city could be killed in 48 hours, provided six enemy airplanes could pierce the city's defenses.

At the War Department, however, officials said they knew of no such development.

Wood also advocated maintenance, but not expansion of the nation's air forces.

He conferred with a group from the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, which called to thank him for his stand against big outlays for the army and navy.

Secretary Adams said today that the proposed dirigible would not be among the items cut from the $401,000,000 budgetary estimates for 1933. President Hoover has set $340,000,000 as the amount he desires the navy to have.

The contract for the ship has been let, conditional upon the navy's accepting the Akron.

Scrivenor Allowed to Consult With Lawyer

HOUSTON, Tex.-(AP)—W. S. "Shilo" Scrivenor, ex-convict under two murder indictments in connection with the slaying of C. A. "Keggy" Jones, and his wife, was permitted to consult with an attorney Wednesday after Criminal District Judge Whit Boyd halted efforts of officers to hold him incommunicado.

Scrivenor, brought back from Des Moines, Iowa, early Wednesday by Sheriff T. A. Binford and Chief of Police P. F. Heard, was spirited away from the county jail by Detective Chief J. K. Irwin and another officer Wednesday morning while L. M. Kenyon, Galveston attorney, awaited arrival of Sheriff Binford to obtain permission to talk to the prisoner.

College to Keep Grades Until Students Graduate

GRINNELL, Iowa.— (AP) —Freshmen at Grinnell College hereafter will wait four years before they learn what grades they received.

College officials have decided students place to much emphasis on comparative value of grades rather than on gaining knowledge.

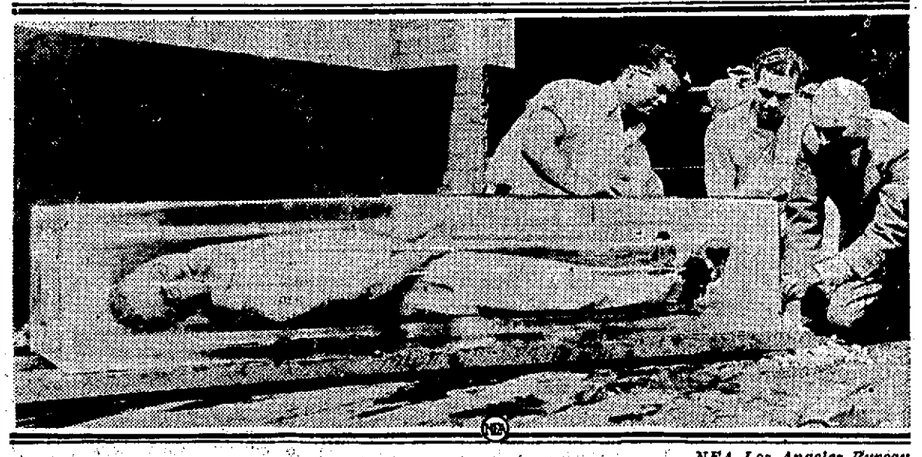

Students trying for high grade averages, they said, are apt to devote their time to easy courses rather than more difficult subjects which would aid them later in business or professional life.

Henceforth, therefore, Grinnell students will be informed from time to time if they are doing satisfactory, poor or failing work, but they won't know until they graduate whether they obtained an "A" or "C" average.

Cattle From Ohio to Be Shipped to Turkey

CANTON, Ohio.—(AP)—Mustapha Kemal Pasha, modern president of Turkey, who is interested in developing dairy industry so that Turkish children may have plenty of milk to drink, has been given two young dairy cows from the herd of H. W. Hoover here.

The two cows which will become a part of the presidential herd, already have started on their long journey to Turkey.

W. H. Hoover, father of the donor, is president of the American Friends of Turkey. A part of its program is to educate Turkish youths in America. Two of these students spent 6 months at the Hoover dairy studying scientific farming.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

SOME cuts of meat are less expensive per pound than others for several reasons. Tenderness, lack of waste and ease of preparation all are determining factors in the price of meat. But if more fuel must be used in cooking the "cheap cut," if there is less edible meat in the whole and if more pounds must be purchased for a meal, the merit of the cheap cut is doubtful.

However, if housewives will plan to cook these cuts that require long cooking while the oven is going for baking, the cost of fuel is decreased.

The waste is made up in the delicious flavor of the dish. Long, slow cooking develops a rich, appetizing flavor. Casserole dishes combine vegetables with meat in such a way that all the juices are preserved.

By using all the meat the housekeeper makes it possible for the butcher to sell the choice cuts at a more reasonable rate. If we demand porterhouse exclusively the butcher finds himself with flank steak and chuck roasts on his hands to such an extent that he must charge a seemingly exorbitant price for the meat he does sell to make up for what he cannot market.

Some morning when the oven is hot for baking, put in this rolled flank of beef. Then at dinner time reheat the oven for an hour and bake the extra vegetable or pudding while the meat is finishing. The steak will cook in the heat of the cooling oven and also in its own heat in the morning so an hour at dinner time is enough to thoroughly cook the dish.

Rolled Flank Steak

The steak should be scored by the butcher or at home before preparing for the oven.

Make a paste of 1-2 teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, and 3 tablespoons vinegar. Spread meat with paste, cover with stuffing, roll and tie. Dredge with flour and bake as suggested for two hours in a slow oven.

Stuffing: Two cups stale coarse bread crumbs, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 teaspoon salt, hot water.

Mix salt, pepper and onion with bread crumbs. Add melted butter and mix lightly with a fork. Add hot water, carefully mixing with fork. The dressing should be moist enough to hold together, but not sticky or pasty.

Do not roll the steak too tightly. Bind securely with cord. When ready to serve, cut the cord and remove from roll.

Another good way to cook a flank steak is in a casserole with vegetables. Spread steak with paste as in preceding rule and cut the steak to fit the casserole. Arrange in layers with carrots, potatoes, turnips and onions. Season with salt and pepper, add 1 cup boiling water, cover and bake an hour and a half in the morning and an hour at dinner time. Serve from casserole.

Flank steak is also spread with the paste, "smothered" with a thick layer of thinly sliced onions and baked in a covered frying pan in a slow oven for two hours. One-half cup boiling water is added when steak is put in the oven.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Iced tomato juice, cereal, cream, buckwheat pan cakes, syrup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Celery and rice in egg sauce, lettuce sandwiches, molded pears, milk, tea.

DINNER: Rolled flank steak, scalloped potatoes, creamed new turnips, apple ring salad, green tomato pie, milk, coffee.

Wet Candidate Winner In Wisconsin Election

RACINE, Wis.—(AP)—An anti-Hoover progressive republican, Thomas R. Amlie, Elkhorn attorney, was elected by first Wisconsin district voters to fill the unexpired term of the late Representative Henry Allen Cooper, "dean of the house."

With all but two of the 200 precincts reporting, unofficial returns gave Amlie 14,295 votes. His closest rival, A. J. Bouma, Racine, upset political forecasts to get 7241 ballots.

Amlie, supported by the progressive republicans, Governor Phillip F. LaFollttte; his brother, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, and Senator John J. Blaine, in his campaign, made attacks against the 18th amendment, the republican tariff and the administration's handling of the unemployment problem.
